

Making Connections

How might I find out what students already know about what we are about to read/study?

How might I help them access what they know and have experience with both inside and outside the classroom that is related to what we are about to read/study?

To Past Experiences

To Future
Experiences

How might I help them not only build on prior experiences, but reframe their thinking when appropriate?

What are the "beyond the classroom" applications/implications of what we are about to read/study? How might I incorporate them into the learning experience?

Between Learning Experiences
in the Present